

Telephone calls from TV and Radio Stations are as much a nuisance as any other unsolicited call. The TV and Radio station calls are defacto marketing for each advertiser that supports their operation. I am quite capable of reviewing channels and their programs and deciding which I prefer to listen to or watch. All venues of unsolicited calls are intrusions on my privacy and should be unlawful. Governing agencies at all levels and entities they represent or regulate communication facilities should not be exempted from the do-not-call law. In fact, the government, its agencies and commissions should be strictly prohibited, both as policy and law, from making unsolicited calls or using other forms of uninvited forced communication.
